ABSTRACT

The article is an analysis of Romanian toponyms and hydronyms which are made up with the suffix -ău. In Romanian this suffix is very productive at the level of all language compartments: appellatives, proper names and toponyms.

The derivatives made up with this suffix and having as base nouns, adjectives, verbs or interjections, often have a pejorative-depreciative connotation. The connotation is expressed by the suffix, highly frequent in usage to form popular geographical terms.

We analysed the frequent changes from appellatives to toponyms or hydronyms by transonymization, their distribution according to areas and hydrographic basins, the coincidences appeared between names of places and names of bodies of water. A higher concentration of names containing the suffix -ău is encountered in the north-west of Romania, since the suffix is of Hungarian origin. We conclude that a large number of toponyms are based on Romanian words containing the suffix -ău and they are the result of a process of toponymization.

Key words: apelative, proper name, toponym, suffix, toponymization

In the Romanian onomastic system, the method of derivation holds an important place in the formation and enrichment of the proper names inventory, which has already been noticed in many speciality books.

The researchers who dealt with the problems of derivation in the Romanian language usually avoided the analysis of proper names from this point of view. Generally, they considered that the derivation at onomastic level is not very different from the derivation in the common language. The complexity of the derivational problems in toponymy and anthroponymy should have aroused not only the interest of the onomasts, but that of Romanian language specialists, because one can notice many ambiguities in the interpretation of some lexical suffixes as onomastic suffixes, without taking into account the frequent transfer of appellatives to the class of proper names.

In order to demonstrate some aspects connected to the strict approach of the problem of proper names etymology, we shall try, in this article, to analyse the Romanian toponyms derived with the -ău suffix, which comes from the ó, ő Hungarian suffix and, in some cases, from the -ov/-ev Slavic suffix. It is very productive in Romanian, due to its role in the derivational process in all three language compartments: appellatives, toponyms and anthroponyms.

Depending on the geographical spreading and on some historical conditions, the -ău suffix can be found in the following variants on the Romanian territory: -ău, -au, -eu, -ou; -ălău, -ărău. This variants can be found both in appellatives and in proper names.

The words derived with the -ău suffix are formed starting from nouns, adjectives, verbs and interjections. The new lexical units, resulted from derivation, are generally nouns, regardless of the part of speech they are derived from. We shall quote here a number of derived words, also mentioning their meaning and etymological basis.

Words derived from adjectives: bălău “fair-haired person”, “fair, light-coloured” < băl + -ău; bolândău, *bolânde*u “nutts, crazy” < bolând + -ău, -eu; bunău “good” < bun + -ău; cârău “wheat variety” < *câr*n + -ău; drăgălău, drângălău “common law husband” < drag + -ău; largău < larg + -ău; lungău < lung + -ău; molatecău “soft” < molatec + -ău; molălău “weak” < moale + -ălău; molău “lazybones” < moale + -ău; mutălău “dumb man; silent, grumbling man; silly man” < mut + -ălău; prostănău “stupid man, silly man” < prostan + -ău; spânău “glabrous man” < spân + -ău; surdălău “deaf and stupid man” < surd + -ălău; tâmpău, tâmpău “silly, abnormal man” < tâmp + -ău.

Words derived from interjections: bâțățău “feast, party” < *băț*a + -ău; bocălău “which/who knocks” < boc + -ălău; boncău “sledge hammer” < bonc + -ău; crancău “jackdaw”, croncău “raven” < cronc + -ău; cronțău “hard bread” < cronț + -ău; hăpău “glutton” < hap + -ău; horcău “who snores” < horc + -ău.

All the examples given above are nouns, regardless of their derivational basis. The meanings of the derived words go beyond the meanings of the bases and usually refer to people (shortcomings and qualities), the suffix usually introducing a deprecating, depreciatory or augmentative nuance (see băbălău, clănțău, lingău, morândău, mutălău, nătărău, tândălău, trăncănău, tutălău, etc.).

All these words have a Romanian word as basis, regardless of its origin. Bolând, for example, from the Hungarian word bolond, is a Romanian word widely used in Transylvania and Banat. The word derived from this basis, bolândău, is of Romanian origin. The augmentative-depreciatory nuance introduced by the suffix proves it. A number of words end in -ău, but they cannot be considered derived words because the root does not exist in Romanian. For example, ancău < Magh. ankó “clumsy, dull”, bancău < Magh. bánkó “stilts”; ciurgău < Magh. csurgó “water source”, etc.

A very large number of words with the -ău/-eu suffix are popular geographical terms (entopic terms) – mostly heights, slopes, peaks, rocks, gorges, plane laces, hollows, forests, hydronyms (running waters, stagnant waters), human activities related to the soil, to animals, plants, roads, etc.

We considered it necessary to list some of these terms, as well as some data about their spreading in various Romanian counties, because many of them can be found in the toponymy and hydronymy of the entire country.

Here are some examples: adăpău “water source converted for drinking or for watering cattle” (Ab, Bt, Bv, Db, Dj, Gj, Mh, Ph, Sv, Vs) < adăpa + -ău; bahahău “hollow made for collecting rain-water” (Gj); barcău “marsh, pond” (Cs) v. bărcău; băgău “path on the very bottom of a river bed or a valley” (Hd) < bag + -ău; bălătău “muddy, stagnant water” (Bc) < baltă + -ău; bălcău “marshy place, lake” (Olt.) < bălc + -ău; băltărău “big pond” < baltă + -ărău; băltău “hollow for collecting water” (Db, Nț); “big pool” < baltă + -ău; bărăscău “muddy, marshy place, with lots of water” (Db); bărcălău “swampy river meadow”(TI) < bărc + -ălău; bărcău “marshy river meadow” (Dj, Gj, Nț, Ot, Sv, TI) < bărc + -ău; bărgău “longish hillock” (Db); bicașău “large stone, buried in the ground” (Mm) < magh. békasó; bicaștău “gravel ground, sand” (Bh); bâdădău “weedy place” (Ot); bâhlău “foul water” (Nț) < bâhlă + -ău; bâlhău “marshy place where reed grows” (Dj, Ot) < bâlcă + -ău; bâldâhău “deeper place in the river bed, where children bathe” (Ot) < onomatopoea “bâldâh”; bâlhău “muddy and marshy place where reed grows”(Ag); băltău “swimming place with deep water in the river bed” (Ag, Db) < băltă + -ău; bârlău “hollows with water” (Ph); bobăldău “big, pointed boulder”(Ag); bobâlnău “small knoll” (Ag); bobărcău “big, pointed boulder” (Ag); bohăltău “the place where logs are stacked” (Sv); bolătău “moving ground, place holding water” (Sv); borău “noisily running water” (Cs, Tm) < bară + -ău; bordău “ground or stone knoll on a mountain slope” (Ag, Dj, Ph, TI); botântău “the upper end of the gutter where logs are stacked before they are sent to the valley” (Bc, Nț); branițău “sheep manure, the place where manure is stacked” (Bz) < braniță + -ău; brădău “big bushy fir-tree” (Gj, Ph) < brad + -ău; bubulău “big knoll, carbuncle-shaped” (Ag); budălău “lake in a flooded area” (Bv); budulău “water source converted for drinking or for watering cattle” (Ag, Sb) < magh. buduló; budurău for meaning, see budulău (Ab, Hd, VI) < budur + -ău; bulătău “muddy pond, pool” < maybe rus. boloto “marsh” + -ău; bundileu, bunghilău “knoll, hill slope” (Ot, VI); burău “falls” (Cs) < bur (the upstream end of a stormy running water) + -ău; butălău “water source converted for drinking” (Sb); butău “block of wood” (Ab, Ag); căciulău “not too high, but pointed hillock” (TI) < căciulă + -ău; căldău variant of găldău; călnău “part of a former streamlet” (II); cănău “the central flow of a running water” (II); cănțău “small, sharp, clapper-shaped top” (Ag); cealău “bush”; cergău “wooden trough” (Bv); chichilău “bigger irregular knoll in plain or river meadow areas” (Bc, Bz); chiralău “enclosure where lambs are kept in spring” (Bv) < magh. kerülö; ciclău “big, pointed knoll with round base” (Bv); ciocău “the beaklike part before the top, with pointed end” (Ab) < cioc + -ău; ciocâlțeu “pointed, salience-like top” (VI) < magh. csikoltó; ciocârlău “hillock, pointed hill; hill, mountain” (Ag, Cj, Db, Gj, Hd, If, Mh, Nt, Ot, VI); cioclău for meaning see ciocău (Bt, Ph, Sb); ciorău “water source running through a tube drain” (Bc, Hd, Mh, Mm, Ot, Ph, Sv, TI, Vs) < cior(ăi) + -ău; ciordău “water source running through a drain” (Ag, Dj, Gj, If); ciorgău for meaning see ciorău (Sm, Sv); “noisy water falling”

Here is a list of village names and watercourses names formed with the -ău suffix, names excerpted from The Reversed Dictionary of Romanian Localities and from The Dictionary of Romanian Watercourses, as well as from the Index of Romanian Localities and the Atlas of Water Cadastre.

Across the country there are over 200 names of administrative units (villages and towns). We shall list some of them, by counties, divided into two main groups: the south-east region and the north-west region.

In the south-east region we have the following toponyms ended in -ău: Argeş: Bântău, Măţău; Bacău: Asău, Bacău, Bălăţău, Bolotău, Carahlău, Ferestrău, Tazlău; Botoşani: Copălău, Cuzlău; Brăila: Jirlău, Tăcău; Buzău: Buzău, Cislău, Hardadău, Pânăţău, Tisău; Constanţa: Almălău; Dâmboviţa: Ghemălău; Galaţi: Tăplău; Ialomiţa: Gâldău; Gorj: Reslău; Iaşi: Curagău, Hârlău; Ilfov: Cărătnău, Câlneau, Făcău, Mirău, Tămădău, Vărbilău; Neamţ: Ceahlău, Şugău, Tarcău, Tazlău; Prahova: Vărbilău; Suceava: Falcău, Sadău, Ţibău, Viţău; Teleorman: Gărăgău, Tăvârlău; Tulcea: Azaclău; Vaslui: Bagău; Vâlcea: Otăsău; Vrancea: Boţârlău, Herăstrău, Motnău, Ţipău.

One can easily notice the high concentration of localities in the north-west region, because the -ău suffix is of Hungarian origin.

Because of many toponyms and hydronyms share the same name, we shall list some hydronyms formed with the same suffix, divided according to the hydrographic basin they belong to. Argeş: Câlneau, Pălălău; Bega-Timiş-Caraş: Beregsău, Cherăstău, Igazău, Tău; Crişuri: Barcău, Beretău, Condratău, Cosmău, Fonău, Orbău, Santău, Serăstrău, Vărăsău, Vâlcău, Zugău; Dunărea: Almalău, Rău; Ialomiţa: Vărbilău, Vitnău; Jiu: Hodinău; Mureş-Aranca: Cergău, Cricău, Ditrău, Fierăstrău, Fiţcău, Gârbău, Mirislău, Şicasău, Şugău, Tăstăru, Trascău; Olt: Dobârlău, Gherghelău, Hosăsău, Lisnău, Otăsău, Părău; Prut: Chisălău, Hărbăru; Siret: Asău, Barasău, Bolătău, Buzău, Caraclău, Caraslău, Călăsău, Câlneau, Chichirău, Cracău, Falcău, Giupalău, Herătău, Mandău, Motnău,

Palcău, Pănătău, Răcățău, Rău, Sadău, Sugău, Tarcău, Tazlău, Tighetău, Tisău, Titilău, Țibău, Vițău, Zăbrătău; Someș: Bandău, Bârgău, Bârsău, Bicău, Cavaștău, Cicârlău, Gârbău, Gurușlău, Inău, Jimău, Lipău, Măcău, Morău, Răcățău, Tarcău, Țiclău, Zalău; Tisa Superioară: Măcărlău, Sărăsău, Socolău, Șugău.

As one can see, most of the names belong to the hydrographic basins of Transylvania. Although there are 29 water names (ended in -ău) in the Siret hydrographic basin, most of them flowing into the right-side of the river, they undoubtedly belong to the Transylvanian area. The hydronyms in the Olt basin, too, must be included in Transylvanian region. In the hydrographic basins of southern Romania, few watercourses names end in -ău, a situation similar to that of the toponyms. Thus, we can draw the following conclusion: this suffix can be found mainly in the north-west area of the country.

Studying the two lists, that of toponyms and that of the hydronyms, one can usually notice that many of them share the same name (see Almălău, Asău, Bârgău, Beregsău, Bicău, Buzău, Călnău, Cergău, Cricău, Dobârlău, Falcău, Gârbău, Lipău, Lisnău, Măcău, Orbău, Otăsău, Pănătău, Sadău, Sarasău, Șugău, Tarcău, Țibău, Vărbilău, Zăbrătău, etc.), and sometimes they share the same name with the appellatives (see Bolătău, Cergău, Ciurgău, Dâmbău, Gâlmău, Ghergheleu, Jirlău, Hârlău, Șirlău, Țicău, etc.). As toponyms, they can come directly from the respective appellatives which belong to the entopic terminologic group (analysed above).

Consequently, the toponyms and the hydronyms (originated in a transonimization process) can share the same basis: the Romanian appellatives.
