

FORMS OF THE ABSOLUTE SUPERLATIVE IN CONTEMPORARY SPOKEN ROMANIAN

Mariana VÂRLAN

Abstract

In the contemporary Romanian language, there is a tendency for people to continually try to get integrated into a linguistic fashion, by appropriating all kinds of expressions uttered by people who are frequently present in the media, and who actually mask their linguistic impoverishment. One of the consequences of those tendencies can be detected very easily in the means of expressing the absolute superlative, means that go far beyond the limits of the forms recorded by the actual grammars. We cannot help noticing the special productiveness of different prefixes and prefixoids like super, hiper, ultra, etc., and of the lexemes bestial, criminal, de belea, de comă, etc., specific to the young people’s language. Along with these few observations concerning the way of expressing the superlative, we cannot help noticing that the post-modern society is characterized by the incapacity to communicate using succulent words, that the mindful, natural and elegant language is no longer a feature of today’s speakers.

Key words: absolute superlative, contemporary Romanian language, lexical impoverishment, adjectiv, speech

Résumé

Le parler actuel enregistre la tendance des gens de s’intégrer continuellement à la mode du langage, en s’appropriant toute sorte de répliques appartenant à des personnes généreusement médiatisées, qui en réalité ne font que masquer un vocabulaire pauvre. Une conséquence de cette tendance peut être facilement dépitée dans les moyens d’expression du superlatif absolu, qui dépassent de loin les limites des formes grammaticalisées. Nous ne pouvons passer sur la productivité hors de commun des préfixes et des préfixoïdes: super, hiper, ultra, etc. de même que celle des lexèmes bestial, criminal, de belea, de comă, etc., spécifique au langage des jeunes gens. Les remarques que nous venons de faire prouvent que la société post-moderne se caractérise par l’incapacité de communiquer en utilisant des mots pleins de sève, que le langage soigné, naturel et élégant n’est plus l’apanage des locuteurs de nos jours.

1. The actual Romanian language (and by this we mean especially the period after 1990) is characterized, first of all, by a series of striking lexical transformations, which have been triggered by several factors: socio-economic progress, freedom of expression, change of mentalities and implicitly of lifestyle, etc. The ideal of the contemporary society does not settle for simple features but imposes superlatives. The specific feature of this period is the speakers' preference (for the moment) for certain words or constructions, meant to render aspects of a life intended to be lived superlatively.

It has been acknowledged that the actual cultivated speech is getting closer to the colloquial speech, from which it actually borrows different lexemes, some of them being used to express the absolute superlative. Yet, before enumerating these forms we will make a short presentation of the superlative.

A grammatical category characteristic of the adjective and of certain adverbs and called for by the semantic content of certain speech parts that concentrate a high amount of affectivity, the superlative is in Romanian the expression of the maximum or minimum degree of intensity of the attributes of an object considered in relation to other objects (relative superlative) or by itself (absolute superlative). The superlative degree is of two types: relative and absolute, and each of these species can be of superiority (cel mai bun, foarte bun) or of inferiority (cel mai puțin cunoscut, foarte puțin cunoscut). Using the superlative, "the speaker indicates the fact that the attribute expressed by the adjective or the circumstance expressed by the verb is at the highest degree by comparison with the same attribute or circumstance taken as basis (the positive degree)"<sup>1</sup>.

Comparison has undergone a very significant modification in the Romanian declension compared to Latin. If the Latin comparison was formed synthetically (using the suffixes -ior/-iu, -issimus/-issima/-issimum, etc.), in Romanian the category of comparison is generally analytical. In popular and classical Latin, the absolute superlative was expressed (except for the forms ending in -issimus, reintroduced in Italian, Spanish, Portuguese) by using numerous adverbs: sane, valde, bene, multum, fortiter, a model that was preserved in some contemporary Roman languages: It. molto bello, ben pochi, Fr. bien peu. Today, the adjectives formed using the grammatical suffix -isim, in order to mark the absolute superlative, derived from scholarly Latin, of the type clarisim, rarisim, simplisim, importantisim, are more rarely encountered, being specific to the language of educated people (scurtissim, secretisim, senilissim, succintissim).

2. To express the meaning of absolute superlative, along with the neological suffix -isim/-issim, the neological prefixes/prefixoids: arhi-, extra- hiper-, super-, supra-, ultra- are used, to which the word-formation element mega<sup>2</sup> can be added.

Using these word-formation elements, adjectives, nouns or verbs with intensive meaning are created, which can be interpreted as representing the absolute superlative of the basic word, yet are not forms of this word, but new words<sup>3</sup>, recorded as such by the dictionaries: arhiaglomerat, arhicunoscut, arhiplin; extrafin, extraplat; hiperacid, hiperangajări, hiperemotiv, hiperlucid, hipersensibil; superdotat, superfin, supergreu, superbez, superrefractar; supraaglomerat, supraîncălzit, supraponderal, suprasaturat; ultracentral, ultraelegant, ultramodern, ultrasensibil, etc. The superlative prefixes/prefixoids have become extremely productive in contemporary Romanian, being used especially along with adjectives and nouns, characterizing especially young people's language, but also the language of certain people who pretend to be "stars" (super preț, super distracție, super efect, super acțiune, super impact, super hazos, super încântat, super tare, superfan, super top, super manele, super bancuri, <sup>2</sup> On the word formation element mega, Mioara Avram considers that it has acquired a superlative value recently in words such as: megaelitist, megahidos, much more numerous being the augmentative/superlative constructions with noun basis: megaconcert, megaescroc, megasticlă, megasponsor, megaparastas, etc., extremely frequent in today's mass-media (Mioara Avram Gramatica pentru toți, ediția a II-a, revăzută și adăugită, București, Editura Humanitas, 1997, p. 126).

Taking a closer look and studying their meanings, you cannot help thinking that maybe you have come across a different world that you cannot enter unless you are super, too. Without any difference, without any supplementary detail, music, clothes and people all hold the maximum feature, super<sup>5</sup>, with the variants beton, demențial, tare, trăsnet, etc. We can no longer deny this reality, as to any suggestion you get the answer OK!, or instead of the characterization of a person or a thing you are told: E cool!/tare!/marfă!/super!, etc. In a society where the desire for perfection obsesses us continually, people (especially those who want to get married) must be “absolut sinceri”, must have “calități sufletești ideale”, “siluete ireproșabile” (Zafiu 2001: 97), and the young people need to wear “cercei cu mega-perle”, listen to “mega-hituri” and get dressed “cool”. At the same time, young people have significant chances to become “supermodele” and in order to become so they need to be “super-populari” (the examples are taken from magazines for young people: Bravo Girl, Cool Girl, Bravo and Popcorn).

Even prices can be evaluated superlatively: “prețuri de excepție”; “prețuri foarte avantajoase” and even “prețuri incredibil de scăzute”<sup>6</sup>.

Certainly, an essential role in these formations’ development and reinforcement goes to the mass-media, which by means of certain channels of proliferation does nothing else but deepen the crisis of language of the post-modern society<sup>7</sup>: “Se vor afla piste noi, care vor duce poate la găsirea

<sup>4</sup> We are not going to discuss the issue of the orthography of these derivatives or compound words.

<sup>5</sup> “Beyond their superlative connotation, these words say nothing. Super! can be just as well a woman, a bicycle, a stew, a film, a inner state... You no longer try to be descriptive, to make a difference between fermecător, tulburător, surprinzător, provocator, incitant, copleșitor or some other quality. You just say Super! and you get rid of it.” (Pleșu, Comedii la porțile Orientului, 2007, p. 23-24).

<sup>7</sup> Among them, the press is the one that “by means of the written word, allows the masses to know about what is new in different domains, provides a vivid image of the changes in the language; the press handles an extremely receptive language, meant to reflect the actual linguistic reality; moreover, it has the quality of influencing today’s vivid language to the highest degree” (See Introducere in DCR<sub>2</sub>, 1997, p. 10).

mijloacelor de a elimina acești microbi superrezistenți” (F. As, nr. 549, ian. 2003, p. 23); “În istoria mai recentă a muzicii pop nu există superstar care s-o întrecă pe Madonna în ceea ce privește ego-ul...”; “supervedeta anului 2003 – Ruse Whitespace” (F. As, nr. 549, ian. 2003, p. 21); “Unele apartamente și terenuri au ajuns la preț de chilipir, după ce ani de zile au fost supraevaluate” (F. As, nr. 860, mar. 2009, p. 2); “ne temem de supraturism” (F. As, nr. 860, mar. 2009, p. 3); “Suprasolicitarea produce stres. Lipsa de solicitare – megastres!” (F. As, nr. 860, mar. 2009, p. 20); “o supradoză de politică”; “o gară supermodernă”; “un superconcert”; “un megaconcert” (M. B., nr. 372, 14 iunie 2002, p. 8); “Poliția Rutieră a fost dotată cu motociclete și mașini ultraperformante”; “Megaturneul național «Muzica Antidrog» continuă” (M. B., nr. 404, 5 sept. 2002, p. 1); “sistemul sanitar românesc este supradimensionat” (M. B., nr. 336, 18 iunie 2002, p. 2).

3. In order to increase the intensity of a quality, you can either repeat a prefix (extraextrafin, ultraultramodern, ultraultracentral), or associate two prefixes (arhisupraaglomerat, ultra-supra-computerizat) or, with obvious tendencies of exaggeration, a string of two prefixes and a word formation element can develop: “Și, dacă sunteți ascultători aveți șanse să câștigați și un super mega extra nemaipomenit premiu” (M. B., nr. 336, 18 iunie, 2002, p. 6), or even three prefixes and a word formation element ultra-hiper-super-mega-star (concerning Michael Jackson). Many of these formations are not accepted by the literary language, being specific for the colloquial, informal language, but the fact that they are taken over by an increasingly significant number of speakers makes it possible to find them in the actual educated style.

Along with the above-mentioned elements, there appears in the spoken language, and especially in the young people’s language, a series of fashionable adjectives such as criminal, demențial, fenomenal, mortal, trăsnet or adjectival phrases like de belea, de comă, de crimă, de milioane meant to be used with a strongly appreciative meaning: “Un site demențial care îți aduce știri cuminți” (www.efiiefficient.com); “Lada Niva tunat demențial” (www.masini.ro); “Fotografie mortală” (www.dannegru.com); “O pradă mortală” (www.port.ro); “o femeie trăsnet” (www.myvideo.ro);

“o știre trăsnet” (www.adriannastase.ro); “În ceea ce privește finalul, e de toată comă.” (www.libertatea.ro); “un frate de belea”, “tovarăș de belea”, (www.voxpublica.realitatea.net); “o fermă de belea” (www.cinemarx.ro); “pariuri de milioane” (www.pariuridemilioane.ro); “o dimineață de milioane” (www.europafm.ro), etc.

4. The variety of the forms of the absolute superlative presented above demonstrates, on the one hand, the dynamism of today’s spoken language and, on the other hand, contributes to its lexical impoverishment, while bringing a plus of expressiveness. Though many of them are specific for the colloquial or/and argotic register, occupying a special position in the young people’s language, their use is becoming a barometer of nowadays’ sociocultural level.
