ABSTRACT

The paper aims to identify certain markers of the semantic-pragmatic category of linguistic presentation in the Romanian documents and records of the 16th century. The theoretical framework consists of Discourse Analysis and Functional Grammar. The analysis points out that the texts discussed comprise a rich inventory of forms by means of which the semantic-pragmatic category of presentation is realised and which are adapted to the specifics of legal and administrative communication. The study identifies literary presentative interjections, characteristic of written language (adecă, iată ‘here (is)’); uite ‘look, lo, see’. For allocutive formations, the predominant functions are identity presentation and identification (similar to the initial, “demonstrative” value of presentatives, recorded for older periods), which are directly related to the objectives of the studied documents (as opposed to Modern Romanian, in which the citational, argumentative and focalising functions of presentatives are dominant). In non-allocutive formations, one can notice the multifunctionality of the verb a fi (‘to be’) for presentative meanings.

Keywords: linguistic presentation, presentatives of existence, identification and narration, argumentation presentatives, focalisation presentatives

1. Introduction

This paper aims to identify certain markers of the semantic-pragmatic category of linguistic presentation in Romanian documents and records of the sixteenth century.⁴² The theoretical framework consists of Discourse Analysis (of French background)⁴³ and Functional Grammar.⁴⁴

1.1. Linguistic presentation and presentation markers⁴⁵

Linguistic presentation is the operation that conveys the intention to determine the means of existence (localisation in space and time) of a being, thing or process.

The discourse by means of which presentation is achieved has two fundamental components: the presentative element (presentation index) and the presented element. If the presented element is another discourse, we are dealing with the phenomenon of reported speech.

The semantic-pragmatic category of presentation is realised by means of a variety of forms in different languages; of these forms only some are grammaticalised. The linguistic support of presentation is culture-bound.

⁴² See Sources. In the presentation of the material, the original form of the quoted texts was preserved.

⁴³ Among others, see; Authier-Revuz (1995); Charaudeau (1992); Charaudeau & Maingueneau (2002); Ducrot (1980, 1984, 1998); Vion (1992).

⁴⁴ In this respect, see GALR (2008), I-II and GR (2013).

⁴⁵ For a detailed discussion of this topic, see Manu Magda (2009, 2011).

Presentative indices (presentatives) are linguistic markers that pertain to various lexical-grammatical classes; their role is to perform linguistic presentation. As regards the contexts in which they operate, presentatives may have two functions: a discursive one, when they introduce an utterance or a piece of utterance whose content they foreground; and a deictic one (see GALR 2008 I: 668-669).

In relation to the fundamental values that presentatives develop contextually, they can be grouped into the following categories: existential presentatives, identification presentatives (of nomination, or presentation of the spatial and temporal coordinates of a context), citational presentatives (of narration), argumentation presentatives (which present the argument of necessity, the cause, consequence/effect and development of an action) and focalisation presentatives (of intensification).

With respect to the *dominant modality*⁴⁶ in a text, there are two kinds of presentative indices: allocutive (oriented towards the addressee and marked grammatically by the use of the second person in the form of the verb or pronoun) and non-allocutive. Depending on the degree of formality with which they are associated, presentative indices pertain to various functional registers (for instance, see in Romanian the textual presentative iată ‘here (is)’, as opposed to the colloquial uite ‘look, lo, see’).

One can also notice that some of these markers are polysemous, as they can be used to express manifold presentation modalities (which are distinguished by their construction). The same presentation marker may correspond to a range of functions that differ in matters of type of construction or context.

1.2. Characteristics of the investigated material

The approach of the linguistic material from the aforementioned perspective highlights a series of problems, such as: a) the type of text discussed; b) the communication strategies employed in those types of texts; c) the existence or inexistence of a specific feature (the preference for certain markers and their contextual distribution) in the realisation of presentation in the discourse of Romanian texts of the sixteenth century.

Sixteenth-century Romanian is represented through the following types of texts:

I. a) Religious translations from Slavonic or Hungarian, that is, the Maramureş translations, defined by striking dialectal features;

b) The books printed by Deacon Coresi;

II. Diplomatarium: private letters and documents, which were written in a language that is close to contemporary Romanian and to which the present study refers (see Cazacu & Rosetti 1961: 47; and Crestomație 1983: 29-30).

Stylistically, some of these texts pertain to the epistolary style⁴⁷, whereas others belong to the legal-administrative style⁴⁸.

⁴⁶ The term modality is used with the definition in French linguistics (e.g., Charaudeau 1992: 579-598).

⁴⁷ “The characteristic of these texts is a more complex language structure and a language that is closer to colloquial speech yet also dependent, to some extent, on the influence of phrasings that are specific to the styles in which this language is manifested (epistolary, administrative, legal, historical and ecclesiastic). Moreover, as a result of the habit of writing in Slavonic, a series of words, phrases and even whole sentences from this language invade the texts, even more so the deeper they are rooted into the history of Romanian writing or when they pertain to chanceries.” (Crestomație 1983: 30).

⁴⁸ Legal constraints involved a certain linguistic expression and there was not only a specific technique, but also a specific language that legal texts had given prominence to ever since the sixteenth century. The (official-)

With respect to the channel of communication, letters contain communications conveyed in writing (“artificialised” through the spatial distance between the interlocutors and the temporal distance between their “lines”, i.e. utterances), which are realised in official and familiar variants. Epistolary communication develops in a one-way direction (from the sender/locutor towards the receiver/addressee), so that its texts can only be approached from an actional perspective, in which attention would be focused solely on the pole of message issuing and encoding, while the pragmatic aim of the communication (the reaction obtained at the pole of reception) could only be anticipated.

Due to the means of their creation, messages imply different degrees of connection between writing and orality (code mixing), as well as the association between fixed (initial, final) expressions and elements allowing for greater freedom of expression.⁴⁹ It was determined that, in the beginning, the general formulation of Romanian documents and letters was calqued on the Slavic model⁵⁰.

The communication strategies used in letters generally followed the patterns of the epistolary style of the age. By and large, the documents have some parts in common, which, however, take rather varied shapes. On the level of composition, one can identify in letters the mixing of codes (Slavic/Romanian), styles (high/colloquial) and means of reporting speech (direct/indirect).

Legal utterances are the linguistic expression of assertive acts with a directive value. Participants in communicative acts of this kind have fixed roles: the legal discourse is unilateral, developing in a univocal direction, in the shape of a monologue coined by a legislator and communicated at a distance via the legislative text.⁵¹

As regards the existence or inexistence of a peculiarity in the realisation of presentation in the discourse of Romanian documents of the sixteenth century, several aspects can be highlighted:

- the use of enumeration as the preferred device for the organisation of presentation (a means of achieving semantic progression, specific to legal documents and administrative deeds);
- the presence of the relationship of coordination – which generally involves more than two units and determines the appearance of “syntactical chains” in the text;
- the inclusion of elements of oral speech to various extents, thereby leading to the appearance, on the pragmatic level, of certain contradictions in the structure of the texts (manifested first and foremost through a certain pragmastylistic heterogeneity).

The interplay of the aforementioned elements results in the configuration of the texts based on the characteristics of the means of expressing presentation, which will be discussed below.

administrative style is defined by Diaconescu (1974: 96); the administrative register is derived from the legal one and is subordinated to the latter; see also Stoichițoiu-Ichim (2002).

⁴⁹ For the treatment of this topic, see Stiluri epistolare in Zafiu (2001: 179-192).

⁵⁰ Cf. Bogdan (1938: 18), apud Crestomație (1983: 31); see also Crestomație (1983: 30).

⁵¹ For the structure of this kind of correspondence, see Crestomație (1983: 30-31). As regards the composition, in legal documents one can recognize the identity of the person issuing the act (intitulation), the report of the reasons underlying the making of the act in question (narration) and its object (disposition), as well as, more often than not, the mention of some types of punishment – anathemas, curses (sanctio) – meant for whomever might infringe the object of the document (the poena spiritualis and poena temporalis in an eschatocol), the date, sometimes even a pious phrase or a praise – the appreciation, and finally the signs of validation (signatures, witnesses, seals and address).

2. The system of presentation

In general, the system of presentation in Romanian is similar to the one in other Romance languages. In Romanian, there is a partial grammaticalisation of allocutive presentation – by means of *presentative interjections*⁵² – and a diversified inventory of ungrammaticalised presentation strategies that facilitate the expression of various presentative values.

For sixteenth-century Romanian, we can identify certain forms that are different from those of contemporary Romanian (see, for example, adică ‘here (is), namely’ as opposed to uite ‘look, lo, see’), but also a partially differentiated specialisation of the meaning of these forms (which naturally occurred in agreement with the type of text considered).

2.1. Allocutive indices of presentation

2.1.1. Presentative interjections⁵³

The presentative interjection is the main grammaticalised means of fulfilling the operation of presentation in Romanian. In what follows, some examples are provided from the investigated material, to illustrate the various forms and values of presentative interjections:

ADICĂ (with the variants adecă and adăcă), meaning “iată” (‘here (is)’), “uite” (‘look, lo, see’)⁵⁴. The pragmatic values of this item are as follows:

- presentative of existence and identity

- (1) Adecă eu, Marin o(t) Boldești, scris- am acest zăpis here (is) I Marin from Boldești written=have(I) this agreement

Rafail, so that it be known that I have sold the domain of Scrovișt.’
(DÎ, VII Zăpis de vânzare*J. Dâmbovița sau *J. Prahova, 25 martie 1582)

⁵² Among others, cf. MDA s.v. prezentativ, -ă, a (‘presentative’) [At: Pușcariu, L.R., I, 113 / PL: -i, -e/ from the verb prezenta ‘to present’ + suffix -tiv / (Rare, about interjections) Which points out, underlines a meaning. Also: deictic. Used to describe presentative interjections in contemporary Romanian, see Manu Magda 2009ab.

⁵⁴ “A word of debatable origin (according to DA, its origin is unknown, according to Philippide, in Principii de istoria limbii, p. 7, it is derived from id est quort or ad id quod, an etymology also adopted by Scriban (DLR); according to Procopovici, Dacor. X, 79, from adest eccum, whereas according to Ciorănescu, from Latin adaeque ‘equal, the same’). With a primarily adverbial value, the interjectional use of adică is extremely frequent in literary and nonliterary texts from the period explored. [...] Adică vies with iată (iacă).” Frâncu 2009: 151.

 (DÎ, LIX*Însemnare*Galați, 1570–1571)

3.1.2. Other allocutive indices of presentation

Besides the aforementioned grammaticalised forms, there are allocutive constructions that, in certain circumstances, develop a presentative function, both in Old Romanian and in the contemporary language.

Some allocutive indices of presentation in Romanian are read off the syntactic structures (more often than not, they are synonyms); for example:

- the imperative form of the verb (a) afla (‘to find out’) + conjunction, relative form (că ‘that, as’, ce ‘that, what, which, who’, care ‘that, which’, cum ‘how, as’, de ce ‘why’, despre ‘about’, unde ‘where’, and so on), noun,⁵⁵
- the hortative subjunctive form of the verb (a) ști (‘to know’, with imperative value) + că (‘that, as’).

Among the most important values of the presentatives in question, the following can be mentioned:

- the narration/announcement value

- (7) Să ști domiata că cu pașa <au> purces și să_{SUBJ} know.SUBJ.2SG highness=your that with pasha.DEF (he)has gone also when you had been there as well. That is what we communicate.’

 (DÎ, LXXIXScrisoare*Moldova, [p. 19 august 1591 – a. 20 iulie 1592])

- the argumentative (persuasion/emphasis) value

- (8) Iară de dăbilar, să ști dumneata că tuturor

 in consideration

⁵⁵ This type of phrase, traditionally used as a clichéd expression in the communication of news in the epistolary genre, is very productive in contemporary written Romanian, as well as in the spoken language. It is employed especially in order to present, in an emphatic manner, news considered particularly important and sensational, of which allocutors must be informed.

‘As for the tribute collectors, you should know that everyone took into consideration all of Your Highness’s decisions...’
(DÎ, XCIII Scrisoare 10 iulie [1593])

- (9) De alta, de veț întreba domniia-voastră și de

‘Moreover, should Your Highness ask about any news from our country, let Your Highness know that there is peace with the Turks and with everyone else.’
(DÎ, XXV Scrisoare*Transilvania, [noiembrie 1599 – septembrie 1600])

Interrogatives sometimes develop a presentative function:

- direct rhetorical interrogatives

- (10) Ce- au cerșut Mihaiu voievod de la împăratul?
what=(he) has asked Mihai voivode from emperor.DEF Cerșut- au 2 000 de pedestri.
asked=(he)has 2,000 of pedestrians
‘What did Voivode Mihai ask from the emperor? He asked for 2,000 infantrymen.’
(DÎ, XXXII Act diplomatic*Transilvania, [ianuarie 1600])

- presentative interrogatives rendered in indirect speech by means of conditionals + the verb a întreba (‘to ask’)

- (11) Și după acia, de veți întreba domnevoastră de astă and after that if AUX.FUT.2PL ask.INF your highness about this parte de locu de încoace, să știți domnivoastră că part of place of here să_{SUBJ} know.SUBJ.2PL your.highness that

(it)is.IMPERS well and peace
‘And afterwards, should Your Highness ask about our part of the world, let Your Highness know that all is well and peaceful.’
(DÎ, XXII Scrisoare *Craiova, [noiembrie 1599 – septembrie 1600])

3.2. Non-allocutive indices of presentation

3.2.1. Indices of existential constructions

Existential constructions are syntactic structures that contain a verb of existence (a fi ‘to be’, a exista ‘to exist’, a se afla ‘to exist, to be extant’ – or a counterpart), specialised in indicating the *means of existence of a being (or process)*⁵⁶.

⁵⁶ Cf. Manu Magda (2010a).

Existential constructions display specific syntactic patterns (see the traditional structure [a fi ‘to be’ (existential) + subject]⁵⁷); nevertheless, the presentation of existence can also be achieved through free constructions, in which the specific content is conveyed mainly by lexical, ungrammaticalised means.

The markers of this subcategory are presentatives of existence – equivalents of existential constructions in French (il y a / il est / il existe), English (there is / are) or German (es gibt). In the texts investigated, these presentatives are obtained solely with the verb of existence a fi (‘to be’, with generic value), which has got numerous meanings. In time, the Romanian language has developed its inventory of existential presentatives to such an extent that it now benefits from a varied range of forms that can be linked to this category.

Functionally, the category of presentation is not homogeneous. There are several means of presenting existence.⁵⁸ They can refer to:

3.2.1.1. The relative existence of a being/thing/process, which can be treated in a particularising manner (“there is an x...” or a nonparticularising one (există, sunt ‘there is/are’, with a general meaning).

- (12) și noi avem uric încă de la Alexandru vodă cea Bunul [...];
and we have deed since from Alexander voivode CEL(NOM≡ACC) good.DEF și de cându-i uricul sînt 200 de ani.
and of when=is deed.DEF are 200 of years
‘We have right of inheritance ever since the [time of] Voivode Alexander the Good [...];
and we have had this right for 200 years.’
(DÎ, LXXXII* Scrisoare Mănăstirea Modovița – j. Suceava, [30 iunie 1592])

The type of presentative quoted above is less frequent in documents, given the nature of the investigated texts, which are designed to be concrete, precise and unambiguous. However, the type of presentation in question is rather frequently rendered through the “transitive pattern, containing the head verb [a avea ‘to have’ + direct object position]: Am teamă [(I)have fear ‘I am afraid’], Am greață [(I)have nausea ‘I am nauseous’], Am lehamite [(I)have disgust ‘I am sick and tired’]. The transition from the existential construction with the verb a fi [to be] to the one with the verb a avea [to have] determines the transition from the intransitive, impersonal scheme to the personal, transitive one (with weak transitivity), a difference that relates to the syntax of the verb, not to the overall semantics of the construction”.⁵⁹

⁵⁷ The verb [a fi ‘to be’ (existential) + noun subject] displays special features; GALR 2008 II: 359 mentions: “According to Romanian grammatical tradition, the constructions contain the ‘existential’ verb a fi [to be], followed by a subject with special characteristics. The special features of the subject consist of: - the compulsory postposition of the nominal subject, which, actually, can be accounted for by the fact that a fi [to be] functions existentially; - the lack of articulation of the nominal subject, facilitated, on the one hand, by the partially fixed construction pattern and, on the other, by the occurrence of nouns denoting atmospheric phenomena, which can be interpreted as mass nouns; - the difficulty for the nominal subject to take on determiners and, implicitly, the impossibility of receiving an individual interpretation (*Afară e acest frig [Outside is *this cold], *Îmi este acest frig [I am *this.DEM cold]).”

⁵⁸ In this paper, the configuration of the classes of presentatives was taken from Charaudeau’s work regarding the French language (see Charaudeau 1992: 301ff.).

⁵⁹ On this topic, see also Niculescu (2005).

3.2.1.2. The identity of a being (thing/process): ‘It is about the one who is called X’

This means of presentation consists of revealing the identity of a referential being or a process (and, one may add, also revealing their presence). This type of presentation has got a marked designating value, as it implies the existence of a physical/mental space, in which an identity appears. By their nature, documents frequently record this pattern:

 (DÎ, XXXIII Act diplomatic (ciornă)*Transilvania, [ianuarie 1600])

⁶⁰ For a discussion of this topic, see GALR (2008 II: 929-945).

⁶¹ “Reorganisations of the canonical information structure (Subject / Theme + [Predicate and objects] / Rheme) are frequent in discourse usage, as they are pragmatically and suprasententially determined through the intention of communication and / or the accommodation to previous utterances / lines” (GALR 2008 II: 140).

3.3. Presentative deixis

In the legal genre, the main means for the realisation of co-reference – construed as a text-cohesion device – consists of pro-forms, in this type of discourse, demonstratives, indefinites and relatives occur more frequently than they do in everyday use.

Proximal demonstrative pronouns usually ensure cohesion on utterance level (within a clause or sentence) and, at the same time, discourse precision, by reduplicating a noun or several nouns representing the referential source that is present in the same utterance (Stoichițoiu-Ichim 2002):

- (29) Pentru aceea, i- am făcut și noi această scrisoare

 Boboc’s part, in good peace. This is what I write and confess through my letter, so that things be known.’ (DÎ, LXIX Zapis de întărire Iași, 15 aprilie 1587)

In Romanian, the presentative function is also fulfilled by elements pertaining to a restricted class of deictic expressions (see descriptive / presentative deixis), adverbs and adverbial phrases (așa ‘thus’, astfel ‘thus’, în felul ăsta / acesta ‘in this way’, în acest mod ‘in this manner’) or adjectives (așa ‘thus’, astfel de ‘this kind of’, asemenea ‘such’ and so on), which refer ostensibly to the characteristics of certain actions or entities that belong to the context of communication (the former as referential deictics, the latter as relational deictics or deictic determiners) (GALR 2008 II: 747).

5. Lexical-grammatical indices of exposition / dissertation

5.1. Lexical indices of presentation

In relation to the stylistic variety found in the sixteenth-century texts investigated, several standardised genres were identified (based on the aim, form and content of the deeds) for the various types of written documents: letter, order, confession, (sales / purchase) agreement, will, record (according to the names of the texts in the corpus).

5.1.1. Citational presentatives

These are presentation indices that, on the one hand, are found in citational discourses, in which they may co-occur with the basic forms of reported speech (direct and/or indirect speech) and, on the other hand, function as introductory elements of presentation acts. Theoretically, *all declarative indices*⁶² can function as citational presentatives. Practically, this function is fulfilled only by those elements that, contextually, introduce a linguistic presentation (in agreement with its definition). This is particularly the case of declarative verbs proper, such as *a spune*⁶³, *a zice*⁶⁴ (‘to say’) and others, which usually express an objective opinion, and also involve secondary declarative verbs, which develop meanings subordinated to the general meaning of carrying out an utterance act: a chicoti (‘to giggle’), a întrerupe (‘to interrupt’), a tuna (‘to thunder’) and so on (see GALR 2008 II: 819).

⁶² “Declarative verbs make up an extremely heterogeneous lexical field in Romanian and a significantly open class, given the fact that, depending on the context, many verbs can be used with a declarative value” (Barbu 2008: 16).

⁶³ spune (‘(to) say’) (Transitive) 1. To express vocally a thought, an opinion, and so on; to utter, to speak, to declare. 2. To expose, to relate, to present; to tell, to recount, to narrate. 3. To disclose, to confess something to someone [...] < Latin exponere.

The presentation in direct speech is introduced by means of elements pertaining to the category of verba dicendi (34), nominal elements (35-36) or expressions of discourse quotation (37).

(DÎ, *J. Maramureș, 24 mai 1593 CXIII *Zapis de împărțire)

As far as the presentation in indirect speech is concerned, a special status is found for the prototypical dicendi verb a spune (‘to say’, with the variants spun ‘I say’ / grăiesc ‘I utter’), because its secondary meaning is “a relata, a transmite, a presenta” (‘to relate, to convey, to present’).

In most written texts, the function of the verb (a) spune (‘(to) say’) is borrowed from (a) scrie (‘(to) write’) + the impersonal subjunctive form of the verb a ști (‘to know’), să se știe (‘(it) be known’):

5.4. Locative constructions

On this occasion, attention is drawn to the existence of certain *locative constructions*⁶⁵ that have a presentative value:

- (45) Nu e vreame acum să ne batem cu Moldova, că

 ‘A big altar door of circle-patterned red silk, confined by poles; two icon-decorated damask altar linens hanging at the entrance, between poles...’

⁶⁵ According to GALR (2008 I: 328), “With some verbs, which are not numerous, the semantic-syntactic paradigm of the verb also includes ‘circumstantial roles’ like the locative, whether one talks about verbs of motion (Intră în cameră [enter.IND.PRES.3SG in room ‘(He/She/It) enters the room’]), or stative verbs (Locuieşte în Bucureşti [live.IND.PRES.3SG in Bucharest ‘(He/She/It) lives in Bucharest’], Figurează în titlu [appear.IND.PRES.3SG in title ‘(It) appears in the title’], Fereastra răspunde în grădină [window.DEF open.IND.PRES.3SG in garden ‘The window opens towards the garden’]).”

6. Final remarks and conclusions

The present paper underlined the fact that non-literary sixteenth-century texts comprise an extensive inventory of forms by means of which the semantic-pragmatic category of presentation is realised. These forms are adapted to the nature of the corresponding legal and administrative type of communication.

The study identified scholarly presentative interjections, characteristic of written language (adecă, iată ‘here (is)’). Uite (‘look, lo, see’), which is specific to oral language and is widespread in contemporary Romanian, is absent from the texts investigated.

As regards the allocutive constructions found in the analysed texts, the functions referring to identification and identity presentation are predominant (their meaning is close to the initial, “demonstrative” value of presentatives, recorded for older ages) and they are directly linked to the aims of the documents discussed. This differs from the situation of allocutive forms in contemporary Romanian, in which their citational, argumentative and focalising functions are prevalent.

With respect to non-allocutive constructions, one can notice the multifunctionality of the verb a fi (‘to be’) in conveying presentative meanings (sunt ‘(I) am, (they) are’, indicating relative existence, identity, actual presence in a certain place, and sunt in impersonal constructions).

In purpose subordinates, the present subjunctive form să fie of the verb (a) fi is rather frequently recorded in the sixteenth century (with 59 occurrences in Documente), as it was suitable for the legal and administrative register (in which chronicling the objectives of certain activities was of the utmost importance).

(DÎ, IV Mărturie*Mănăstirea Bistrița, j. Vâlcea, 21 decembrie 1573)

In time, the inventory of presentative elements has developed in Romanian to such an extent that one can currently note a complementary distribution of existential constructions that contain, on the one hand, the form există (‘there is’) and, on the other, the superfluous and generic (categorical) form sunt. Of the two aforementioned forms, the former appears especially in formal accounts of more educated speakers, whereas the latter is typical of colloquial speech register.
