Abstract

The category of trade names is vast, offering a broad spectrum of terms for research. Of them, we have selected the trade names of bread, highlighting various aspects of classification, typology, onomasiology in different contexts, also focusing on the social meanings of bread.

Key words: trade name, generic name, name, category, meaning

Résumé

La catégorie de noms commerciaux est vaste, en offrant à la recherche un spectre large de termes. Parmi eux, on s'est arrêté aux noms commerciaux du pain, en mettant en évidence divers aspects concernant la classification, la typologie, l'onomasiologie, dans différents contextes, en soulignant en même temps les significations sociales du pain.

Mots-clés: nom commercial, nom générique, dénomination, catégorie, signification

0. Trade names are characterized by diversity, the fruitful result of some lexico-semantic, grammatical and/or figurative creations. The manner of naming is fully motivated, in line with developments in the economy and trade. Among other categories of words, that of trade names contributes to the diversification of the Romanian vocabulary and provides a rich and diversified research basis.

Among the trade names circulating in the Romanian language¹, those of bakery products represent a category that has been little studied. Bread holds a special position. For this analysis, we have selected a corpus of about eighty simple units and phrases from the Romanian on-line press.

1. In general usage, the word pâine/ 'bread' is defined as "a staple human food, made from a dough of flour and other ingredients, raised by fermentation of yeast, kneaded with water and baked in the oven"².

Depending on the main features, there are several types of bread: depending on the content, there is pâine cu cartofi/ 'potato bread', pâine de seară/ 'rye bread', pâine cu semințe/ 'seed bread', pâine cu nuci și hrișcă/ 'bread with nuts and buckwheat', pâine cu ciuperci/ 'bread with mushrooms', pâine cu bere/ 'bread with beer', pâine cu dovleac/ 'pumpkin bread', pâine cu ierburi/ 'bread with herbs', pâine cu legume/ 'bread with vegetables', pâine cu orez/ 'bread with rice', pâine cu schinduf/ 'bread with fenugreek', „Ciabatta este o pâine albă italiană cu un miez ușor umed și coaja crocantă.”/ ‘Ciabatta is Italian white bread with soft, moist crumb and crisp crust.’ (<http://www.lauraadamache.ro/2008/09/ciabatta.html>, 12.09.2008, Ciabatta).

d. Bread also has metaphorical names, for instance: pâinea pădurarului/

‘forester’s bread’, Ciobănaș/ ‘Little shepherd’, pâinea miresei/ ‘bride’s bread’, pâinea lui Manole/ ‘Manole’s bread’, pâinea Sfântului Petroniu/ ‘Saint Petronius’ bread’, pâine Curcubeu/ ‘Curcubeu (rainbow) bread’, pâine Nucușor/ ‘Nucușor bread’, pâine Bunătate/ ‘kindness bread’, pâine Botanica/ ‘Botanica bread’.

„Pâinea lui Manole a fost răsplătită cu mențiune la categoria Painea anului în cadrul celui mai mare târg de profil pe piața autohtonă și unul dintre cele mai importante din Europa Centrală și de Est.”/ ‘Manole’s bread was rewarded with distinction in the category Bread of the year at the largest trade fair on the domestic market and one of the largest trade fairs in Central and Eastern Europe.’ (<http://www.frontera-trading.ro/eveniment-gastro-pan.html>, 17.06.2014, Gustul pâinii de altădată); „Pâinea Botanica, care costă 4 lei 50 de bani, a dispărut de la mijlocul săptămânii trecute.”/ ‘Botanica bread, which costs 4 lei and 50 bani, disappeared in the middle of last week.’ (<http://protv.md/stiri>, 15.03.2016, Unul dintre cele mai ieftine tipuri de pâine a dispărut din magazine).

3. Bread trade names are different in point of structure: simple units and phrases.

Simple units are designated by common nouns: lipie/ ‘flatbread’, baghetă/ ‘baguette’, franzelă/ ‘white loaf’, graham/ ‘graham’, chiflă/ ‘roll’, turtă/ ‘cake’, crutoane/ ‘croutons’ or by proper nouns: Panachida, Focaccia, Fougasse, Panini, Tortilla, Tsoureki, Piadina, Bannock, Ciabatta.

The structure of phrases is different:

a. generic name + adjective: franzelă feliată/ ‘sliced loaf’, pâine împletită/ ‘braided bread’, pâine rotundă/ ‘round bread’, pâine țărănească/ ‘peasant bread’ (literally, ‘peasantlike bread’), pâine intermediară/ ‘bread made from a mixture of white flour and bran’ (literally, ‘intermediate bread’), pâine integrală/ ‘wholemeal bread’ (literally, ‘whole bread’), pâine prăjită/ ‘toast’ (literally, ‘fried bread’), pâine tradițională/ ‘traditional bread’, turte dospite/ ‘leavened cakes’, lipie arăbească/ ‘Arabic flatbread’, pâine grecească/ ‘Greek bread’, pâine nedospită/ ‘unleavened bread’, pâine plămădită/ ‘kneaded bread’, pâine dulce/ ‘sweet bread’, pâine rapidă/ ‘quick bread’, pâine meșteșugărească/ ‘craftsmanly bread’, pâine secuiană/ ‘Secuiana bread’, pâine someșană/ ‘bread from Someș’;

b. generic name + proper noun in the nominative: pâine Anadama/ ‘Anadama bread’, pâine Nistru/ ‘Nistru bread’, pâine de Riga/ ‘Riga bread’, pâine Longevita/ ‘Longevita bread’, pâine Nucușor/ ‘Nucușor bread’, pâine Botanica/ ‘Botanica bread’, pâine Năsturel/ ‘Năsturel bread’, pâine Ciobanaș/ ‘Ciobanaș bread’, pâine Cuptoraș/ ‘Cuptoraș bread’;

c. generic name + common or proper noun in the genitive: pâinea pădurarului/ ‘forester’s bread’, pâinea episcopului/ ‘bishop’s bread’, pâinea miresei/ ‘bride’s bread’, turta miresei/ ‘bride’s cake’; pâinea Sfântului Petroniu/ ‘Saint Petronius’ bread’, pâinea lui Manole/ ‘Manole’s bread’;

d. generic name + preposition + noun in the accusative: pâine la tavă/ ‘pan bread’ (literally, ‘bread to pan’), pâine cu cartofi/ ‘bread with potatoes’, pâine de seară/ ‘rye bread’ (literally, ‘bread of rye’), pâine cu semințe/ ‘bread with seeds’, turte pe plită/ ‘cakes on the hob’, pâine cu ciuperci/ ‘bread with mushrooms’, pâine cu bere/ ‘bread with beer’, pâine cu dovleac/ ‘bread with pumpkin’, pâine cu ierburi/ ‘bread with herbs’, pâine cu legume/ ‘bread with vegetables’, pâine cu orez/ ‘bread with rice’, pâine cu schinduf/ ‘bread with fenugreek’, pâine cu chimen/ ‘bread with caraway’;

e. generic name + two coordinated nouns, in the accusative: pâine cu nuci și hriscă/ ‘bread with nuts and buckwheat’;

f. generic name + adjective + preposition + noun in the accusative: pâine neagră cu tărâțe/ ‘bran bread’ (literally, ‘dark bread with bran’).

4. The foreign influence can also be seen in the category of bread trade names. The common or proper nouns denoting bread are borrowings from Italian: focaccia, panini, ciabatta; from Spanish: tortilla, Pan de Horno; from French: fougasse; from Greek: Tsoureki. Some names of Indian origin also entered the Romanian language through international circuit: Navajo, Lacha Paratha. Common names such as focaccia, panini, ciabatta became elements of a specialised vocabulary³ in baking terminology.

5. The vocabulary of the Romanian language contains words, expressions and phrases with deep significances. The phraseology created around the word pâine is rich: a mânca pâine și sare (pe un or dintr-un taler) cu cineva = to live together with someone, for better and for worse; a ieși înaintea cuiva or a întâmpina (pe cineva) cu pâine și sare = to welcome someone with honour; a avea (or a ține, a fi cu) pâinea și cuțitul în mână or a pune mâna pe pâine și pe cuțit = to have all the power, all means; (a fi) bun ca pâinea (cea) caldă (or bună) = (to be) really good, to be as good as gold; a mânca o pâine albă = to be wealthy, to live a good life; se caută (or se vinde) ca pâinea (cea) caldă this is said about merchandise which is highly sought after and sells easily; a mânca pâinea degeaba = to be useless; o bucată de pâine or pâinea zilnică, pâinea cea de toate zilele = sustenance means; a lua (cuiva) pâinea de la gură = leave someone destitute, deprive (someone) of all possibilities of existence; a pune (or a băga) în pâine (pe cineva) = to get a job for someone; a fi în pâine (or a mânca o pâine) = to have a job; a scoate (or a da afară) din pâine = to fire someone⁴.

6. Socially, bread has acquired multiple connotations over time. The bookish term companion, an old Frenchism, is semantically related to the word pâine. In Romanian, it is borrowed from Fr. compagnon, originally Lat. com- + panis (“with bread”, subsequently “the one with whom one shares the bread”, “fellow”⁵). The expression pâine și circ/ ‘bread and circus’ was used ironically by the Latin poet Juvenal, as a symbol of the excessive interest of politicians and the people in unimportant things. During the Revolution of October 1917, Lenin promised the people Peace, Land and Bread, symbols on the basis of which the infamous social order was built.

In the Christian-Orthodox tradition, bread is the bearer of the symbol of life, which man offers God. These sacred values have also been passed down through the popular tradition, bread suggesting the idea of life. In the popular mindset, the bread and the coil have acquired an entirely beneficial symbolism: joy, fruitfulness, abundance, fertility, purity. Taking different forms, bread accompanies man throughout life, in moments of joy and sadness. And this is visible even today in traditional communities at various times throughout the year. Bread plays the role of a magical being, endowed with mysterious powers.

⁵ DEX records it as a Frenchism with the meaning “fellow, buddy”, p. 202; cf. DEX on-line, a bookish term, with the same meaning.

7. Trade names enable us to perform an analysis on several sectors of language. Pâine/ 'bread' is a representative word in terms of frequency, age in Romanian and it has generated many expressions over time. In the typology of this trade name, one can distinguish a generic term and one or several determiners, common or proper names, Romanian or foreign names, adjectives. The semantic sphere of the word includes a number of elements which, in turn, may have determiners. The typical structures of trade names designating bread consist of simple units and phrases. In general, the meaning is not figurative, but some names may be metaphorical, given the variety of trade names and their wide circulation. In determining the name, there is a slight association of the generic name with other Romanian or foreign names. The Italian, Spanish, French, etc. influence is manifest at the level of both proper names and common names.

Bread is a word with social and cultural meanings, a well-known symbol in Christianity.
