Abstract

When it comes to the semantic field of a word, one may encounter a number of problems, especially in translation. Words have multiple meanings and are often hard to translate. That is why, in our article, we have tried to focus on the semantic field of the word man, by the medium of different phraseological expressions, derivatives or compounds, idioms, slang words and proverbs. The words and phrases are all defined and arranged in alphabetical order. The semantic field of the word man, just like the semantic field of any other word in the English language, shifts over time. Thus, the original meaning of this word was human being exclusively, while nowadays it is prevalently used to refer to adult male. Nevertheless, its semantic field also extends in some uses to the generic human.

Résumé

Quand il s'agit du champ sémantique d'un mot, on peut se confronter à plusieurs problèmes, spécialement en ce qui concerne la traduction. Les mots ont des sens multiples et sont souvent difficiles à traduire. C'est pourquoi, dans le présent article, nous avons essayé d'analyser le champ sémantique du mot homme, par l'intermédiaire de différentes expressions phraséologiques, des mots dérivés ou mots composés, des idiomes, des termes argotiques et des proverbes. Les mots et expressions sont tous expliqués et arrangés par ordres alphabétique. Le champ sémantique du mot homme, juste comme le champ sémantique de n'importe quel mot de la langue anglaise, a changé à travers le temps. Ainsi, le sens initial de ce mot a été être humain exclusivement, tandis qu'aujourd'hui il est fréquemment utilisé avec le sens d'homme adulte. Malgré tout, le mot homme s'utilise aussi avec le sens général d'être humain.

Our article aims at focusing on the semantic field of the word man (with its plural form men), by trying to render its different meanings and connotations. We are all aware of the fact that the word man, just like any other word, has been submitted to a systematic process of linguistic evolution, to the point that the modern meaning is fundamentally different from the original use. Regarding the etymology of the word man, it is first encountered in Old English, having the form mann, meaning adult male, although it could also designate a person of unspecified gender. The Old English form is derived from Proto-Germanic mannz, meaning human being, person, which is also the etymon of the German word mann, meaning man, husband.

The domain of phraseological expressions based on the word man (with its plural form men) consists of a limited number of expressions. We have had as a reference

- “Time and tide wait for no man.” = No one is so powerful that they can stop the march of time.
- “You can’t keep a good man down.” = Someone who wants something very much will succeed.

Our article has tried to render as many constructions or combinations of words as possible based on the word man, which help any learner of English distinguish spoken from written, formal from informal, literal from figurative usage. People who are learning English find many types of figurative language to be hard to understand because of their vocabulary limitations. The efficiency of vocabulary learning is a prerequisite for the success of language learning. Students or other speakers of English find it hard to remember all the English words or phrases at the same time because some of them can look alike. English words are numerous and only a systematic arrangement of them, based on the semantic field theory, would lead to the development of one's linguistic competence. During the vocabulary learning process, one can compare the words that have similar semantic meanings which can be used incorrectly owing to their slight differences. When discussing the semantic field of a word, it is very important to understand the difference between the literal and figurative meanings of that particular word. Thus, the idiomatic constructions, the slangs, the metaphors, the similes, the hyperboles or the sayings based on the word man provide a new perspective on this specific word for anyone who wants to be at home with the English language.
